

XM Radio is one of the greatest invention of the modern age. It allows for numerous channels and quality programming. Normal radio is filled with spam advertising and is limited programming. All the channels are either turning mainstream or pulling the plug on the station. With XM, it's virtually commercial free, plenty of channels, and plenty of choices of each genre. I don't understand why someone(NAB) would try to stifle the growth of satellite radio by limiting its programming. Wouldn't the better course of action be improving your(NAB) own programming so you can compete with satellite radio? Instead you lobby against better programming than yours. I urge the FCC to reject petition 04-160. I rather pay for XM than listen to junk radio that NAB provides.
